Congressional candidates take aim at Aug. 9 election

By Jack C. Ventimiglia
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — While special primary election results were being counted late Tuesday, the political fight for the special congressional general election Aug. 9 got under way.

St. Clair County Board Chairman Jerry Costello, D-Bellefonte, defeated party rival Clarence Ellis, the East St. Louis Aldermanic Board president, 18,258 to 2,062.

Receiving 4,155 votes in his unopposed bid, Robert Gaffner, R-Greenview, jabbed at Costello's 9-1 victory over Ellis by saying it should disappoint Costello. But Costello cited his easy win and said he is confident of further victories.

Gaffner explained Ellis could not match Costello's money or organization, which included pre-campaign calls to party members from a 40-member phone bank, and two district mailings.

"If I were Jerry, I would have liked to have had a much stronger showing," Gaffner said.

"To say that Jerry's win was not good enough is a most politically naive statement from a person purported to be in politics," Dave Wagner, Costello's campaign manager, said Wednesday.

Costello said his win shows he has a strong base of support throughout the five-county district, a point he said was clear after the March 5 primary in which he defeated three candidates.

Looking ahead to the Aug. 9 special election, Gaffner said he anticipates a tough time trying to overcome Costello's campaign spending power.

"It's apparent that he's going to spend about a half million dollars to try to win this seat. He must know something about an $89,000-a-year job that I don't," Gaffner said.

Wagner said Gaffner is the one who had been talking about raising a half million dollar. Costello's fund raising is in response, Wagner said.

"It's just a case of trying to keep up with the Joneses," Wagner said.

Since March 31, Costello has raised $189,060 compared to $85,000 Gaffner has raised since January, a nearly 3-1 margin for Costello, according to Federal Election Commission figures.

Group against pit bull law

GRANITE CITY — Five area humane societies and kennel clubs have united to form the Metropolitan Coalition for Responsible Dog Legislation.

"They plan to attend the next City Council meeting," the coalition said.

The purpose of the coalition is to combat the growing problem of breed-specific ordinances that have been proposed or enacted by area communities.

The coalition supports generic legislation that is non-discriminatory and protects the public from all dangerous dogs, regardless of breed, a spokesman said.

The coalition's first project is the repeal of Granite City's recently enacted breed-specific ordinance aimed at pit bulls and related breeds. Coalition members will ask to address the council July 19.

The following organizations are members of the Metropolitan Coalition for Responsible Dog Legislation: Belle-City Kennel Club, Bull Terrier Club of St. Louis, Edwardsville Kennel Club, Highland Animal Shelter and Madison County Humane Society.

Rhetoric hot in 21 st

By Scott Cousins

ST. LOUISVILLE — Saying voters here are tired of "Chicago-style politics," Robert Gaffner, R-Greenview, Wednesday said his campaign for the Aug. 9 special general election will emphasize differences between himself and his opponent, Jerry Costello, D-Bellefonte.

Gaffner will meet Costello in the special general election Aug. 9. The regular general election is Nov. 8.

"The voters of this district know the differences between my opponent and myself," Gaffner said, speaking to reporters at his campaign headquarters.

"They are the differences between government for the people and government for those who govern."

Voters have a choice between "blind justice and bought justice," and between "conviction and corruption," he said.

Gaffner said he will not run a negative campaign, but will emphasize facts and that Costello could not "hide behind his war chest."

Costello is expected to out-spend him by a 5-to-1 margin, Gaffner said.

He added that he expects to raise up to $500,000 to spend in the August and November elections.

Among Gaffner's charges were that Costello uses "undue influence" on county employees to persuade them to sell or purchase tickets for Costello's fundraisers. That is one of the reasons, according to Gaffner, that Costello is able to amass so much money.

"I do not have the power to threaten people with their livelihoods," Gaffner said.

He also criticized a recent report by the state's Judicial Inquiry Board dealing with the St. Clair County courts.

The board, which had been criticized for being vague in its conclusions, said it found no proof that Costello had undue influence with the court system.

"If I had been Costello, I would have pushed hard for a clear, definitive statement," Gaffner said. "In this case, I don't think silence is golden."

Gaffner also said he was not concerned by Costello's showing in Tuesday's special primary.

According to unofficial results, Costello beat Ellis by almost a 9-1 margin, 18,258 to 2,062. Gaffner collected 4,155 votes throughout the district.

"We made no effort to turn out the vote," Gaffner said.

Yesterday's low turnout is indicative of the complacency and apathy of the voters," he said.

What each 100 jobs at American Steel means

SIMAPC
This graphic shows secondary benefits of 100 industrial jobs, according to the Southwestern Illinois Metropolitan and Regional Planning Commission, 1984.

PROJECTIONS of the economic impact on this area of 100 new manufacturing jobs were prepared by the Southwestern Illinois Metropolitan and Regional Planning Commission in 1984. If American Steel were to return to its former level of 1,750 jobs, the numbers would obviously be much higher, but not necessarily 17.5 times higher. The projections are for manufacturing jobs in general; they may differ with the actual wage rate at American Steel and also would differ based on the number of persons at the plant who live outside the Granite City area.

Numbers don't tell whole economic story of possible American Steel reopening

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Numbers are only part of the economic story of the possible reopening of the American Steel foundry, two area economists said.

"Service jobs are generally jobs serving people who are already there. These are clearly export, or basic, jobs — jobs that bring money into the city," said Robert Koepke, assistant director, Regional Research and Development Services, Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville.

"We don't buy railroad cars here. So American Steel is exporting cars and importing money. Once the money is in town, it buzzes around."

Koepke said it could be expected the money would be spent and respect 1.5 times, "probably closer to the center (2 1/2 times)," multiplying its effect on the area economy.

Alan Orbals, economic development director, Granite City, said that, because the foundry is in an enterprise zone, the tax benefit would be small in the immediate future.

"But it's got great psychological benefits," Orbals said.

"People will be able to see the effects. Businesses will hire more people, or even have to expand, to handle the increase in customers. It will use contractors to do some of its work and that will bring more work. Etcetera."

Orbals said the foundry's location could have a positive effect on downtown development.

"Three blocks from downtown, it will add to the amount of money in the downtown area on a daily basis. With Granite City Steel, St. Elizabeth Medical Center and Prairie Farms as the big ones, there are more than 6,000 people already working in the immediate area on a daily basis.

"This will increase the supply of people stopping on their way to work or on their way home. I've already sent newspaper clippings to Sam Walton (owner of the Wal-Mart chain)."

William P. Donovan, American Steel Foundries Granite City Works manager, announced July 6 that American Steel will spend more than $1 million and rehire 35-45 employees at the Granite City foundry in preparation for its possible reopening late this year or early next year.

Before it closed in November 1982, the foundry was the nation's largest producer of cast steel railroad freight car side frames and bolsters. In its peak year, 1979, it produced more than 25,000 car sets and employed 1,750 people.

The plant, covering more than a million square feet, is the largest steel foundry in the free world.

A McKinley interurban car, bound for St. Louis, speeding along at 30 mph, lost a passenger yesterday near Edwardsville. James Milligan, 10, Springfield, Mo., leaned too far out the window and was disorged. His head struck a pile of weeds and he was unhurt.

JASON ROBERTSON and his mother, Tammy, return to Lambert Airport after six days with the 'stars' in L.A.

Jason: L.A. trip was 'pretty fun'

GRANITE CITY — Riding in chauffeured limousines, goofing around with movie stars, sitting on top of a piano being played by Elton John — these are a few of the memories 7-year-old Jason Robertson brought home from his summer vacation.

"It was pretty fun," said Jason, who has AIDS-related complex, after returning from California where he mingled with such celebrities as The Incredible Hulk and Goofy.

Jason and his family were guests of Athletes and Entertainers for Kids, a Los Angeles organization that coordinated a dinner show to raise money for AIDS victims. Jason and Ryan White, 16, Cicero, Ind., were guests of honor.

"It was the best vacation of my life," said Tammy Robertson, Jason's mother. "They absolutely treated us like royalty. We saw so much and did so much, and we met so many wonderful people."

At a black-tie dinner on their first night in L.A., the Robertsons befriended film stars Marlee Matlin and Charlie Sheen, and Tony O'Dell from the television show, "Head of the Class."

"We went to parties with them; we had dinner with them. It was just so much fun," Mrs. Robertson said. "Tony especially really took Jason's problem to heart. He gave us his phone number and address and told us to keep in touch."

While in L.A., Jason saw the ocean for the first time.

"He had never seen a body of water," she said.

County helps Granite City man locate employment

James Lemp, Granite City, laid off due to a plant closure, found obtaining another job difficult. However, the Madison County Employment and Training Department reports it helped him find a good-paying job.

Lemp lost his job on July 8, 1987, after 17½ years of work. Lemp, 37, had to support a wife and three boys, ages 3, 9 and 12.

The St. Louis plant, Abex-Handeysson Electric Co., manufactured electric traction motors, generators and components for the train industry.

"All of us, about 125 employees, were terminated. No re-employment was offered. We received back pay and a small severance, nothing else," Lemp said.

"I started job hunting. It was tough. I had a high school education only and no formal skill training or trade. Employers didn't want me even for low-paying jobs. The more places I applied, the more depressed I became. My self-esteem was as low as my funds...and both were going fast."

The unemployment office told Lemp about the two-week "Job Club" program offered by the Madison County Employment and Training Department.

"I went into Job Club on Aug. 31, 1987, with a negative attitude.

My attitude changed as the program and I progressed. The instructor did a very good job. The staff and participants worked together.

"I completed the program and felt that things would improve. I did not get a job while in Job Club, but I saw others who did. I learned that attitude, approach, and planning do pay off. I learned how to set goals and to give interviewers what they want."

One day, Lemp heard Granite City Steel was hiring older workers with long, good employment backgrounds so he went to apply.

"My hopes sank when I saw the large number of applications for so few positions — close to 4,000 applications in two days for about 70 jobs. I got up early and was third in line to get an application."

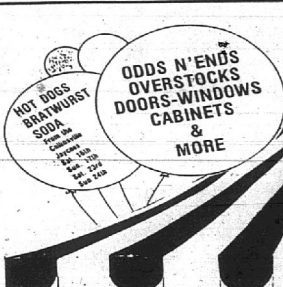

Lemp was hired and went through Granite City Steel's six-week testing and schooling program. On Nov. 10, 1987, he began working as a laborer for Granite City Steel.

For more information on how the Madison County Employment and Training Department seeks to help with free training and/or a job, a spokesman said, persons may call 576-5031.

Operated in cooperation with the Job Training Partnership Act, the department is an entity of the county governments headed by Madison County Board Chairman Nelson Hagnauer and Board County Board Chairman Frank Thompson. Dan Churovich is the administrator and there are offices in Granite City, Edwardsville and Alton.

Agency gets three-year certification

Specialized Services Inc., Granite City and Alton, has received a three-year accreditation from the Commission on Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities.

The commission is a nationally recognized board charged with the responsibility of seeing that agencies serving handicapped individuals adhere to high standards of performance.

The three-year accreditation awarded to Specialized Services is the highest award given.

The program assures that at least every three years agencies serving the handicapped must demonstrate their continued compliance with standards set by the commission.

"Specialized Services is proud of the work done in serving the handicapped," said Tom Moehn, executive director, "and we are pleased the Commission on Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities recognized our efforts to provide quality services to our clients."

Four forever friends

By Andy Siering
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — The best way to describe the long and close relationship between the Red Talley and the Gene Nicholises is with a joke: Fellow goes to prison. His first day there he's sitting in the lunchroom when somebody yells, "16!" Everybody laughs. A few minutes later, somebody yells, "27!" Again, everybody laughs. This goes on several more times, and the man puzzled until it is explained to him that everybody has been there so long and heard all the jokes so many times that numbers have been assigned to the jokes as a time-saving device.

A minute later, somebody yells "23!" Nobody laughs. "Whatsamatter?" the newcomer asks.

'One will tell a big story and the other will back him up.'

— Dot Talley

"Isn't 23 a funny joke?"

"Nah, the joke's funny enough," a grizzled old inmate says. "But that's Clancy, and Clancy never could tell a joke."

A conversation between Gene and Virginia Nichols and Red and Dorothy Talley has that same quality of shorthand communication. The two couples have been friends for so long that you get the impression they know what each other is going to say before it is said.

The four Granite Citizens' ages range from 67 to 70, and they have known each other from childhood. They married their respective spouses in the same ceremony on June 26, 1938.

They have lived on the same street for 30 years, fished and played cards and taken vacations together. Gene and Red worked the same job on different shifts at Granite City Steel for 40 years. Their children are the best of friends.

So, naturally, a newcomer to their mutual-admiration society feels a bit like he's wandered into a convention of secret-code talkers. Short phrases that mean nothing to the stranger will get the four friends exchanging knowing looks and chuckles until one of them remembers to enlighten the stranger.

Gene and Red had known each other since they were 7 years old and attending Emerson School. Both sold the Press-Record. So they were already the best of friends 50 years ago when Red asked Gene to be the best man in his wedding.

"I'll do better than that," Gene replied. "I'll get married with you." But because Gene's would-be wife Virginia was not quite 18, her mother was opposed, even though she had known Gene from the time he was a little boy. So the two couples, Gene (nicknamed "Nike") and Virginia ("Chink"), Nichols, and Milford ("Red") and Dorothy ("Dot") Talley, got married in a sort of double elopement in Robertson, Mo., a little community north of St. Louis.

Since then, about the only time the four have been separated was during World War II. After the war Red and Gene became foremen at Granite City Steel, working different shifts on the same furnace and retiring one month apart 10 years ago, after 40 years.

A party was given for them June 26 by their children and their children's spouses, Bill and Barb (Nichols) Burgess, Jim and Linda Talley and Gary and Sandy Nichols. The party was attended by 100 friends and relatives.

The couples insist they have never argued.

"That just shows how easy I am to get along with," Red averred. The other three laughed.

The two men may agree on who is the best

FOREVER FOURSOME: Dorothy and Red Talley, at left, and Gene and Virginia Nichols reminisce last week about their long and happy friendship of more than 50 years. The two couples were married in the same ceremony in June 1938.

fisherman. "I am," said Gene, to which Red countered, "But he can't come close to me in golf."

But Chink begged to differ. "Us girls are," she said.

They don't observe any unspoken rules of discourse, such as not discussing religion or politics. "We talk about everything," Gene said.

"Yeah, one's just as windy as the other," Chink said.

"One will tell a big story and the other will back him up," Dot said.

Red, perhaps unhappy with the trend of the talk, changed the subject. "We all liked to dance. We went dancing together a lot."

"Do you play cards?" is greeted with whoops.

"Now that's a touchy subject," Chink says. "They cheat!" cries Gene, referring to the wives. "We never tried to hide it," laughs Chink.

"They won't play with us anymore," says Dot. All four chuckled. This interview was conducted on the screened-in back patio of the Nichols' house in the 2800 block of Gary Avenue (the Talleys live two doors down).

There used to be a wheat field out back. One day Chink accidentally set it on fire. When the fire truck came, it broke down in the middle of the field; the four friends laughed and laughed as they remembered that one.

"We've had a lot of good times," said Gene. "And a few heartaches," said Red. "But a lot of precious memories," added Dot, to which Chink chimed in, "Oh, yes! A lot!"

Troupe to perform for area children

The fourth program in the Madison County Arts Council Summer Artists Series will be presented at the Granite City Public Library by the Bubble Gum Alley Troupe.

The 30-minute program of sketches and skits will be held Friday, July 15, at 2 p.m. in the children's room of the main library, 2001 Delmar Ave.

The Bubble Gum Alley Troupe was started in 1987 by a class of young students at the Creative Express in Alton. Creative Express teaches drama, theater, and dance classes for children.

The five members of the troupe write and perform most of their own material under the direction of Bonnie Sue Wadleigh, one of the founders and teachers of Creative Express group.

The intended audience for the program is children 7 through 10 years old.

Riverfront ad competes with flag

By Bonita Gower-Tillman
Staff writer

EAST ST. LOUIS — Visitors to the V.P. Fair during Independence Day weekend had to look at a giant Pepsi advertisement to see the city's flag on the east riverbank.

The flag, the most visible display on the east bank of the Mississippi River because of its size, was almost dwarfed by a spotlighted banner with a Diet Pepsi soda can on it in the background, according to some fairgoers.

As thousands sat on the west bank and looked toward the east for the fireworks, they saw instead a light flicker and then spotlight the Diet Pepsi advertisement.

Comments about "the can" rippled through the crowd. The sign continued to be spotlighted during the fireworks.

Malcolm Martin, a St. Louis attorney who heads a group of supporters for the expansion of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial park into East St. Louis, said he saw the banner July 4, but it had not been authorized.

The group of supporters owns about 32 acres on the east riverfront, south of Continental Grain Co., Martin said, and the banner was on a portion of that property.

"It was there just before the fireworks on the 4th," he said. "There should be no advertisement on that site and I'm sure the city and the (National) Park Service would not authorize it. It was a great, big banner with floodlights on it, but I don't think it hurt the flag."

A representative of the Clairmont Pepsi-Cola Distributing Co. of Belleville said she had no information on the banner.

There probably is no way to find out who is responsible for the banner, Martin said, but steps will be taken to make sure the banner and other advertisements do not appear again next year.

U.S. Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel is expected to soon ask Congress to make a decision on the park's extension to the east riverbank.

DUI truck driver in fatal crash facing new charges

A woman — who police said was drunk when her semi-trailer truck crashed into a line of vehicles and killed three people in Mitchell in 1985 — now faces a drunk driving charge and a felony charge of criminal endangerment after a truck crash in Montana.

The woman, LeAnne Crowley Jones, 37, was charged after a truck carrying a cargo of hazardous material overturned June 14 near Billings, Mont.

Jones' husband, Theodore, and another man in the truck were not hurt. LeAnne Jones suffered a leg injury.

LeAnne Jones, from Kansas City, Kan., was convicted of three counts of reckless homicide by Circuit Judge P.J. O'Neill in connection with the Madison County deaths. She served 15 months of a three-year prison sentence before being paroled last September.

On Aug. 5, 1985, two Edwardsville teenagers and a man from St. Louis County were fatally injured when Jones' truck struck a line of westbound cars stopped for construction work on Interstate 270.

Killed in the local crash were Stephen P. Bender, 17, and Robin R. Johnson, 16, both of Edwardsville, and Richard J. Burnell, 60, Florissant. Five people were injured, including Jones and her husband.

Police said Jones' blood alcohol content was .209 percent, more than twice the legal standard for intoxication in Illinois. During her sentencing hearing, Jones said she had been an alcoholic since 1971 but had stopped drinking.

In the Montana crash, the truck Jones was driving overturned on Interstate 90, spilling a load of 112 55-gallon drums containing sodium metal, according to Lt. Jack Gaughan of the Montana Highway Patrol.

Gaughan said the substance ignites when exposed to air and can produce flammable gases, but none of the drums ruptured and no evacuation was necessary.

The highway was not closed, but cleaning up after the accident took about 22 hours.

Gaughan said Jones had been released but was taken into custody again June 23 after the felony charge was filed.

Gaughan said she refused to take a breath test for alcohol. She also faces a charge of driving a truck without a chauffeur's license and her husband faces charges by the state's department of transportation for allowing an unlicensed person to drive, Gaughan said.

He said the company that owns the truck had authorized only her husband to drive it.

O'Neill, who convicted and sentenced Jones in 1986, said he is concerned that offenders sentenced to the Department of Corrections do not receive adequate treatment for chemical dependencies.

"At the time, I gave her the maximum sentence and I indicated strongly that she should receive treatment while in prison," he said.

"At least half the people who come through the criminal courts are there for offenses which are drug- or alcohol-related," he said.

O'Neill said the DOC should at least be making a serious effort to treat the problem.

"There should be some way to mandate such treatment in the penitentiary and we (judges) don't have one now," O'Neill said.

Nic Howell, a spokesman for the DOC, said that if such sentencing provisions were authorized and funded by the Legislature, they would be implemented by the DOC.

Howell said Jones participated in an alcohol-dependency program while in prison, and continued treatment was a condition of her release.

"Sending persons to prison to improve themselves is not a very appropriate sanction," Howell said.

Jerry Brown, director of victim and witness assistance in the Madison County state's attorney's office, asked why Jones was released from parole by the DOC on May 12 of this year. He said she should have served at least a year of parole following her release from prison on Sept. 11.

"It would be great if we could revoke her parole," Brown said. Howell said Jones had complied fully with all orders and had done everything required of her under terms of her parole.

Howell said Jones had been released from prison on Sept. 11.

Kaldahl was a passenger in a taxi driven by Edwin Meyers, 41, 1761 Chestnut, when he asked the driver to stop at Sammy's Tavern, 921 Niedringhaus Ave., to pick up a friend. Meyers reportedly stopped the taxi on Chestnut and, at Kaldahl's request, went in to get the friend. While Meyers was inside, Kaldahl allegedly put the taxi into gear and started driving it from the back seat. As Kaldahl attempted to turn onto St. Louis Avenue, the taxi crashed into the fence at American Steel Foundries, Patricia Meyers, Edwin's wife, saw the taxi go by her house, heard the crash and, thinking her husband was driving, ran to the scene. At the taxi, Kaldahl allegedly grabbed her by the throat. When police arrived, Kaldahl

He was 6 feet, 1 inch in height, weighing 150 pounds. He had a tattoo on his right bicep of "Born to Die" and a dagger. The bandit was wearing a cross earring in his right ear and had a spiked choker collar. He was dressed in a blue jean jacket and trousers, a white T-shirt and tennis shoes. The knife was large with a fixed blade.

Firemen extinguished a fire at the apartment of Sheila Cotton, 601 Biswell Street Apartments, at 2 a.m. July 8. A pot on a stove apparently ignited the kitchen cabinets and an exhaust fan.

The Home Front

"A rose is a rose is a rose," the poet Gertrude Stein wrote. She might have been writing about the current decorating craze, which has seen the flower on china, pottery, sheets, quilts and napkins, in addition to chintzes and carpets.

Flying up your attic? Add skylights — several, if you can — to bring in light and air. Costs less than a dormer, and looks more modest.

Brick walkways will hold up better if you start with a sand base of about two inches to keep bricks from sinking into the soil.

Reduction-option mortgages are new on the market and popular. Special features: borrower gets a one-time chance to reduce interest rates on the loan if mortgages fall at least two points in a year. Adjusting the loan costs less than refinancing, and the better to serve our home buyers. Let us find a home for you at

Women pump iron on way to body building championships.

By Andy Stirling
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — "He said he doesn't want to go and watch his daughter try to look like a man."

That, said Rhonda Swain, is why her father probably will not be in the audience Aug. 27 at the Omni Hotel, St. Louis Union Station, to watch her compete in the Gateway Open body building championships.

Three weeks ago in Chicago, Swain took first place in the middleweight division of the Northern Illinois Novice Body Building competition and overall first place in all divisions.

One can perhaps understand why a man of Rhonda's father's generation would feel as he does about women's body building, but let's get one thing straight right off: While Rhonda definitely has muscles, no one could mistake her for a man.

No man would anyway, if you follow my meaning.

Still, she says that on her rare excursions to nightclubs men treat her differently than they used to. She doesn't need the padded shoulders so popular these days. Even in street clothes, it is evident that she is a body builder. The men seem uncertain. Hey, she might deck them if they get fresh.

"Guys are different now," says the 30-year-old mother of three who took up body building 18 months ago. They don't ask her what her sign is or does she come here often.

"They ask me, 'Where do you work out?'"

Jenny Carney, the manager of Renaissance Fitness Center, 3901 Stearns Ave., where Rhonda teaches aerobics, is also a championship body builder. Jenny, also 30 and the mother of two children, is a former winner of the Gateway Open and in June won the Ms. Heart of the USA Open.

Carney, who has been body building for three years — 18 months longer than Swain, has had a bit longer to notice the difference in the way men treat her.

"Men outside the gym are really intimidated," Carney said.

But women, she says, "are usually complimentary, although they don't like the way you look when you're pumped up."

When people ask her the inevitable question, "Do you lift weights?" she just tells them no. "That's my all-time favorite question," she says, laughing.

Yes, that is a pretty silly question to ask a woman who looks like Rhonda or Jenny. Few, if any, women are made this way naturally. It takes a lot, a lot, of hard work to get this way. You've got to pump iron several hours a day, five or six days a week.

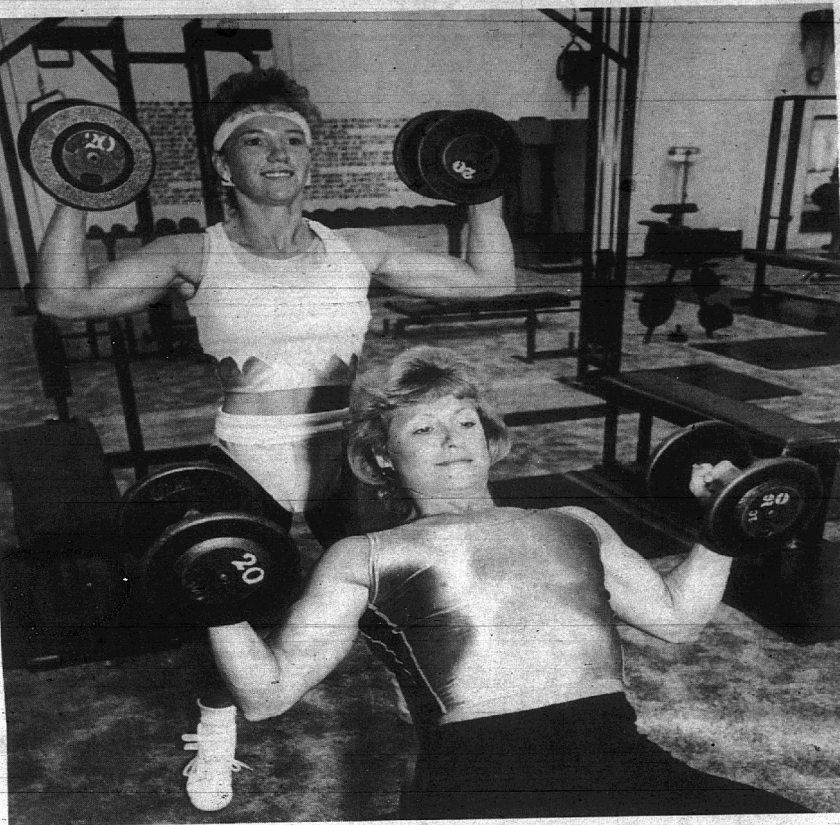

You've got to give up all your nasty unhealth habits and keep a sergeant major's watch on your diet. No wine coolers. No Bud Lights. No cheesecake, for goodness sake!

Rhonda lets herself have dessert maybe once a week. She has to prepare different meals for herself and her children. "I'm a nut for sweets, but you feel so guilty about it it's not worth it," she said. "You come in here and work your buns off to make up for it," she says with a gesture around the lobby of the Renaissance Fitness Center in a complete fitness facility, offering exercises, aerobics classes, Nautilus, free weights, basketball, racquetball, swimming, even tanning booths — at rates that compare favorably to any in the bi-state region.

Thus, the center offers a range of fitness alternatives, but if you have an idea you would like to look like Rhonda or Jenny, you should know that you'll have to pay for it.

You'll have to pay with some serious pain. The groans and gasps you hear from serious body builders would be out of place in a dental torture chamber, which prompts a natural question: Is a heavenly body worth going through hell for? Why do they do it?

The initial reasons are probably similar for every body builder. Carney says simply, "When I turned 28 I decided I wanted to look like I was 18. For me, it's the challenge. It's amazing what you can do with yourself with weight training. It's the only way to change the shape of your body without plastic surgery.

Then it begins to draw you in. "You start building a little muscle. Then you want a little more. Then somebody says, 'Why don't you enter a contest?' I never thought I'd get this far."

Carney is now up against really stiff competition. Having won local and regional open championships, she can compete now only in national contests. But if she can win at the national level, all the hard work will begin, quite literally, to pay off. Pro body builders earn fees for guest posting and for endorsements of weight equipment and nutritional supplements.

Rhonda Swain started doing aerobics several years ago because she was "really out of shape" following the birth of her third child. She had never been interested in athletics before.

"I was always terrible at sports," she said. She started with Nautilus equipment and graduated to free-standing weights 18 months ago.

At the gym, she met her now fiance, Leonard Butler, who had already been a body builder for several years. "Leonard was a big help to me. There's so much to learn about weight lifting, and I think a lot of women are intimidated by all the equipment."

Both Rhonda and Leonard, a Granite City Steel employee who took second place in his weight division in Chicago, receive sponsorship from his father's business, Butler and Sons Lawn Service.

Rhonda weighs the same 130 pounds she did when she started lifting. The difference now is the way the weight is distributed on her 5-foot, 4-inch frame. She is puzzled at first when asked why she does it, just like being in shape, eating right, just feeling good.

One unexpected benefit is that she now has fingernails — long, lethal-looking nails. She could never get her nails to grow before and attributes them to her improved diet.

Body builders are commonly suspected of being exhibitionists at heart. How then to explain why Swain finds posing a little uncomfortable?

"I'm not the kind who wears bikinis on the beach, and here you're wearing practically nothing in front of all these people. I glue my top on with cement adhesive so I don't have to worry about, uh, accidents."

Jenny Carney says she was "always the jock of my family. I was more athletic than the three brothers."

She said women who make rapid progress at body building more than likely have naturally higher levels of the male hormone testosterone. "You have to be genetically suited for it," she said.

Women's body building started out as a very feminine look, said Carney. Then women discovered that the use of steroids could do even more dramatic things for their physiques than it did for those of their male counterparts. Until the contests banned the use of steroids, women body builders were getting more and more massive and muscular.

Now that contestants are being tested for steroids, the trend has reversed toward smoother-muscle "more feminine" look, which Carney says she prefers anyway.

Still, these women have considerable muscles even without steroids, and you wonder about something. Swallowing back embarrassment, you ask it: Do people ever ask to feel your biceps?

"All the time," laughed Carney, "like they don't think it's real or something."

Lost In This Space

By Andy Stirling

It's about time

Like sands through the hourglass, so the days of our lives. Actually, it's more like money through the hands of a spendthrift.

The Associated Press reports that the average person spends about six years of his life eating and five years standing in lines, according to calculations by a Pittsburgh time management company.

Priority — Management researchers armed with stopwatches reportedly spent a year studying hundreds of people. Some of their other findings on how the average person spends his time:

Eight months opening junk mail.

Four years doing housework.

Six months sitting at stoplights.

Two years trying to return phone calls to people who aren't in.

All I can say about this is it's about time somebody figured all this out. Now we can all waste still more time — by being depressed over how much time we're wasting.

Clearly, if time had awareness of how it is misused, it wouldn't be necessary to "kill" it. Time would commit suicide.

But it could be worse. If you lived in Russia, you would spend about 20 years of your life standing in line, for everything from meat to toilet paper to shoes.

They say that shoes are particularly hard to get in Russia, and decent shoes are even harder to get. You would wear out several pairs of shoes standing in line to buy shoes. Apparently perestroika — (restructuring) should be called pair-o-shoes-a, Sady, Soviet citizens are shoddily shod.)

I don't think we should start crowing about this, though. I had a little time to kill recently and did some calculations of my own. Among my findings are the following monumental wastes of time:

Here in the land of hurry up and wait, the average person will spend 10 years watching television in 18 months of which will be commercials! Another 18 months will be reruns.

Three months picking one's nose.

Three months reading about Billy Martin's continuing job adventures. (I'd rather be picking my nose.)

One year in the bathroom.

Six months worrying about how much time one wastes.

Another six months making out time-saving schedules — which become obsolete in no time at all.

One month talking to telephone solicitors.

Now, you may well be wondering how I came up with these figures. It's simple: I guessed. At that, though, I think my figures are at least as reliable as Priority Management's. It takes no time at all to figure out that the average person spends close to two hours a day eating and almost that much standing in line.

DeLuse spends that much time eating, but I know I don't and I doubt many people.

As for spending that much time in lines, it may seem that long, but I doubt it really is. Subjectively, time spent on line is a special category of time, sort of like what happens when you approach the speed of light. Einstein's theory of relativity, (or so I've always been told) says that time slows down as one approaches the speed of light.

Of course, if you can show me a line that moves with the speed of light, I will stand in line to get in it.

But right now I'm having less trouble with time than with space. The production schedule for this page of the paper dictates that this column should always be long enough to fill a full column. Having run out of things to say about time, I am taking a terrible time trying to fill this space.

You might say I'm more lost than ever in this space. Oh well, guess it's time to order the computer to compute the length I have already written — voila! Shucks, not enough.

Okay, let's see... Remember a few weeks ago when I wrote about words and the various ways they can be abused? I got a real keeper in the mail yesterday, a birth announcement. The unfortunate child must have been born with multiple personalities, for the announcement said the child was two — "yellings."

There, that oughta do it. Yep. And it's about time, too.

Varied suggestions for summer reading

Summertime means lots of spare time for kids, so it provides a great opportunity to introduce your kids to a new hobby or help them expand a previous interest. Non-fiction books for children are being written on every conceivable topic and in irresistible formats.

So use your library or bookstore to broaden your child's horizons this summer. Let your child pick the topics and then help him find books he can read.

Because non-fiction is generally more difficult to read than fiction, look for books a little below his reading level. It's better to get books too easy to read than too difficult.

The following suggested books and topics may give you some ideas of what is available.

Most children show an interest in drawing and sketching. Artist-author Jim Arnosky has written several books for children, published by Lothrop, Lee and

By Jane Cosby

Shepard Books, to teach the techniques of a professional artist.

"Drawing Life in Motion" ($8.95) shows budding artists how to observe and duplicate the movements of plants and animals. "Drawing from Nature" ($8.95) covers techniques for drawing land, water, plants and animals.

"Sketching Outdoors in Summer" ($11.95) follows the author as he sketches in his garden and includes his observations and suggestions for achieving artistic effects. All three books are filled with Arnosky's joy and reverence for nature and are written for students age 10 and older.

For younger students who like to draw, Ed Emberley's Drawing Book ($9.95) by Little, Brown and Company is perfect. It is not a book, but a packet containing four drawing comics, five markers and one sketch book. Any child that can follow simple instructions and draw the basic shapes can create more than 75 objects.

Summer skies provide the perfect opportunity for star-gazing. "Discover the Stars" ($10.95), Harmony Books, by Richard Berry, is a beginner's guide to the night sky. Children ages 10 and older will enjoy reading the sky maps and star charts to identify constellations and explore double stars, variable stars, nebulae and galaxies.

"The Planets in Our Solar System" and "Rockets and Satellites" ($3.95 each), both by Franklin M. Branley, provide children ages 4 to 8 with basic information in an easy to read format on these subjects.

These two books are part of the Let's Read and Find Out Book series by Harger and Rowe, which includes more than 100 books on a variety of subjects. Each book is checked for accuracy by experts in the particular field.

If your child enjoys singing, there are some wonderful song books to investigate. "If You're Happy and You Know It" ($13), Greenwillow Books, by Nikki Weiss, is a collection of 18 story songs illustrated in delightful cartoons. The book includes songs you will remember from your childhood.

"Down by the Bay" (9.95), Crown Publishers, is a picture book of a song by the popular singer Raffi. "The Wheels on the Bus" ($11.95), Little, Brown and Co., by Maryann Kovalski, is an illustrated adaptation of a traditional song.

Finger rhymes are fun for both toddlers and older children learning to read. "Peanut Butter and Jelly" ($10.95), E.P. Dutton, by Nadine Bernard Westcott, illustrates in hilarious detail a popular rhyme. "Clap Your Hands" ($13), Lothrop, Lee and Shepard Books, by Sarah Hayes, illustrates 23 fun rhymes for children to read and learn.

Older children who like to use their fingers will enjoy "Super String Games" ($6.95), Morrow Junior Books, by Camilla Gray. This book diagrams 26 string games from all over the world. Manual dexterity is a must for these figures.

Lost In This Space

By Andy Stirling

It's about time

Like sands through the hourglass, so the days of our lives. Actually, it's more like money through the hands of a spendthrift.

The Associated Press reports that the average person spends about six years of his life eating and five years standing in lines, according to calculations by a Pittsburgh time management company.

Priority — Management researchers armed with stopwatches reportedly spent a year studying hundreds of people. Some of their other findings on how the average person spends his time:

Eight months opening junk mail.

Four years doing housework.

Six months sitting at stoplights.

Two years trying to return phone calls to people who aren't in.

All I can say about this is it's about time somebody figured all this out. Now we can all waste still more time — by being depressed over how much time we're wasting.

Clearly, if time had awareness of how it is misused, it wouldn't be necessary to "kill" it. Time would commit suicide.

But it could be worse. If you lived in Russia, you would spend about 20 years of your life standing in line, for everything from meat to toilet paper to shoes.

They say that shoes are particularly hard to get in Russia, and decent shoes are even harder to get. You would wear out several pairs of shoes standing in line to buy shoes. Apparently perestroika — (restructuring) should be called pair-o-shoes-a, Sady, Soviet citizens are shoddily shod.)

I don't think we should start crowing about this, though. I had a little time to kill recently and did some calculations of my own. Among my findings are the following monumental wastes of time:

Here in the land of hurry up and wait, the average person will spend 10 years watching television in 18 months of which will be commercials! Another 18 months will be reruns.

Three months picking one's nose.

Three months reading about Billy Martin's continuing job adventures. (I'd rather be picking my nose.)

One year in the bathroom.

Six months worrying about how much time one wastes.

Another six months making out time-saving schedules — which become obsolete in no time at all.

One month talking to telephone solicitors.

Now, you may well be wondering how I came up with these figures. It's simple: I guessed. At that, though, I think my figures are at least as reliable as Priority Management's. It takes no time at all to figure out that the average person spends close to two hours a day eating and almost that much standing in line.

FEET FIRST

PROPER AND FITTING

By Dr. Claude Hiles

Many foot problems arise out of a patient's attempt to fit into ill-fitting shoes. One thing is certain—a shoe that pinches or rubs during the trying-on stage is likely to cause problems later on. Do not be lulled into thinking that they can be "broken in." Feet grow with age, and sizes vary among manufacturers. A shoe should extend about a half-inch beyond the longest toe. Buyers should be aware that one foot may well be larger than the other. Lastly, either wear or bring your own hose to the shoe store for the fitting.

Pay particular attention to your children's footwear. Shoes that don't fit properly can be very damaging to a child's normal development. Above all, do not pass shoes from one child to another. You can be passing along problems with the shoes! Preventive foot care also includes routine foot exams by a podiatrist. My office is located at 1330 State St., providing family podiatric care. Pediatric disorders, skin conditions, and bone and joint problems are treated. Hours by appointment. Telephone 877-6025, BC/BS, John Hancock, and Medicare are honored.

THE LAW AND YOU

BY RICK REED
Attorney At Law

Recently a woman contacted this office after she was involved in an automobile accident. Her car (Vehicle 1) was struck on the driver's side when another driver (Vehicle 2) ran a stop sign. The driver of Vehicle 1 sustained leg and back injuries which later necessitated surgery on the back for a herniated disc.

The woman driving Vehicle 1 never fully recovered. She was unable to continue working at her job because it required lifting heavy boxes. She could not lift more than 20 pounds after the surgery, and her employer was forced to terminate her. In addition, the injured woman's medical bills totaled more than $15,000.00.

The real problem in this case was that the driver of Vehicle 2 had insurance with liability policy limits of only $15,000/$30,000. This meant that the injured driver could not recover more than $15,000 from the insurance company of the driver at fault. This sum would not even cover the injured party's medical bills. The question arose as to whether the injured person could pursue the driver of Vehicle 2 personally for monies over and above the $15,000 limit.

If a jury in a case such as this awarded the plaintiff an amount over and above the policy limits, the plaintiff certainly has the right to attempt to collect this from the defendant. The injured party may have difficulty, however, collecting a large amount from an individual. The party at fault in a case such as this is often unable to satisfy a judgment out of his personal assets. In addition, many defendants who find themselves in this situation often file bankruptcy to avoid payment of any amount awarded over the policy limits. A majority of injured people in this type of case simply accept the policy limits from the other driver's company as settlement in full for their injuries. They often realize the futility of pursuing the driver at fault personally for recovery over and above the policy limits. The plaintiff, however, may have the option of pursuing underinsured coverage under his own policy if his limits exceed those of the driver at fault. The purpose of underinsured coverage is to allow an injured party to recover from his own insurer when the driver at fault does not have sufficient insurance to provide for his injuries.

•Election Costello, Gaffner trading insults

During a meeting Tuesday with U.S. Interior Secretary Donald Hodel, who visited the Metro East at Gaffner's request to discuss the proposed expansion of the St. Louis Arch grounds to East St. Louis, Gaffner received Hodel's endorsement. Following the meeting, Mayor Carl Officer declined to endorse Costello, a fellow Democrat, or Gaffner.

Asked if not supporting Costello was a backhanded endorsement for Gaffner, Officer said, "I wouldn't know. I haven't been around politics long enough. I'm young in politics."

A political maverick, Officer is in his third mayoral term, is a former St. Clair County deputy coroner, served as deputy director of driver services for the state, and holds a political science degree. For Congress in 1986, Officer endorsed Madison County Auditor Pete Fields; Glen Carbon, in the Democratic primary.

of water so wide that he couldn't see across it. He went to the edge of the beach, and he stood there and looked out across it and said, "So, that's an ocean." Then the waves came in. They came up to his feet and he got scared and turned around and started running."

The dinner show raised about $250,000, said Elise Kim, executive director of Athletics and Entertainers for Kids. The money will go toward several national charities that help children with AIDS and other serious illnesses, Kim said.

been discussed yet, Wagner said. Costello said he plans to run a positive campaign.

"Between now and Aug. 9, we'll be asking the voters to compare my record of accomplishments with that of my opponent's," Costello said.

Gaffner said, "I'm getting a warm reception in East St. Louis. Jerry says he'll stand on his record. That's all well and good, but I would remind him East St. Louis is part of St. Clair County."

Gaffner said jobs and renovation are vital to East St. Louis and how the city reacts to what Costello has done to meet those needs will be important in the Aug. 9 election.

Costello captured 73 percent of the vote in East St. Louis, Ellis' hometown.

"We ran very strong in East St. Louis despite the fact that the president of the city's Democratic committee (Will McGaughey) was working against me," Costello said.

Costello did well in East St. Louis because, Wagner said, "I think the people of East St. Louis realize that we need an accomplished person in Washington. The people know we need a doer, not a spectator."

"We don't need someone who pops up every two years to unsuccessfully run for Congress and then he doesn't do anything else the rest of the time." Repeated efforts to reach Ellis at home and elsewhere, by telephone and in person, Tuesday and Wednesday were unsuccessful.

Costello and Gaffner are competing to fill the unexpired term of the late U.S. Rep. Melvin Price, who died April 22 at the age of 83. The winner Aug. 9, to keep the seat, would have to compete in the general election Nov. 8.

Information for this story was provided by Rick Arnold of the Belleville Journal, Mike Leathers of the Collinsville Herald-Journal, Bonita Tillman of the East St. Louis News Journal, States News Service, and the writer, Jack C. Ventimiglia, of the Granite City Press-Record/Journal.

added.

"As we move forward and have more aggressive campaigning, by both Jerry and myself, interest will increase," Gaffner said he is attempting to build a coalition that reached across traditional party lines, and is succeeding.

He said some former supporters of Pete Fields and Mike Mansfield, two of Costello's opponents in the March primary, worked for him, and that some Democratic precinct committees indicated support for him.

NEA opposes English Only effort

The English Only movement in the United States poses a threat to school children who speak limited English, and to public education itself, says Mary Futrell, president of the National Education Association. NEA is distributing a 29-page handbook on the movement to the association's leaders across the United States. Entitled "Official English/English Only - More Than Meets the Eye," the handbook defines dangers inherent in language restriction.

"Practically speaking, English is and will remain the language of the United States," Futrell said. "English is not in danger, and we can't let alarmists spread unfounded fears that it is. Those fears discourage the teaching of other languages at a time when such communications skills are absolutely essential to our nation's economic and political success."

Children who bring additional languages and cultures to U.S. schools, Futrell says, are "human resources to be nurtured." But the English Only movement short-circuits the nurturing process, she said.

Futrell contended the English Only drive:

- discourages schools from utilizing and building on children's language resources.
- sends false signals to limited-English-speaking students about their educational potential and self-worth.
- generally creates a negative atmosphere about pluralism and the value of language skills to U.S. society.

The new NEA handbook says the English Only movement is promoting changes in the U.S. Constitution to forbid the use of languages other than English. These, it says, could destroy bilingual education programs.

Several educational organizations, including NEA, have gone on record opposing such an amendment.

The handbook includes a chapter offering a historical perspective on language restrictionism.

Copies may be purchased for $3.95 each. They may be ordered, specifying Stock No. 1877-0-00, from: NEA Professional Library, P.O. Box 509, West Haven, Conn. 06516.

Cloud still hangs over Illinois schools, superintendent says

SPRINGFIELD — "The budget acted upon by the Legislature on July 2 will not remove the cloud that hangs over the future of our schools and the educational programs and services offered to our children."

Illinois Superintendent of Education Ted Sanders made the comment in analyzing the General Assembly's fiscal year 1989 budget for schools.

"This ominous cloud will loom over our schools until our lawmakers address the financial commitment that is required to provide the necessary school improvements which they called for in 1985," Sanders added.

"Our students cannot compete successfully in tomorrow's world until the state makes a first-rate financial commitment to our schools."

The education budget includes about $135 million in new spending for education, he said. The State Board of Education's budget asked for $417 million in new spending for educational programs and services.

The General Assembly's education budget provides $107 million in new spending for educational programs and services, with the remainder of the budget going for the teacher retirement systems.

Included in the $107 million are $52.5 million for general state aid, $26 million for categorical and special programs, and $27 million for educational reforms.

"The budget means another class of youngsters will be deprived of needed educational programs which cannot be funded," Sanders said.

"Certainly, this will create hardships for local school administrators and teachers, who must strive to stretch budgets to provide excellence for students."

"But the real pain will not show up for years, when the state's continued underfunding of education will be reflected in the knowledge and abilities of our graduates."

"While the budget may be a valiant effort to squeeze money out of an empty till, the funding for education is shamefully low," Sanders said.

Mammoth plant remodeled

Shortsighted economic "experts" long ago gave up on the Midwest "Rust Belt" and urged America to focus on service jobs rather than attempting to compete in manufacturing, especially heavy industry.

We disagreed at the time and still do. Not only is this a manufacturing center, where jobs are at stake, but also the nation itself would be too vulnerable if it depended entirely on other countries for vital products.

Some area industries have persisted, while others have shut down. But A.O. Smith Corp. remodeled and reopened in the mid-1980s and American Steel Foundries is spending $1 million to refurbish its plant—the largest steel foundry in the free world—for a possible reopening in late 1988 or early 1989.

Factors in the final ASF decision will include continued demand for railroad freight cars and the negotiation of work rule revisions in employee contracts. There also is hope of federal, state or county grants for worker training.

After six years, many people had begun to wonder whether the million-square-foot foundry would gain new life. But a nucleus of the staff was retained and the plant was kept in partial readiness rather than being allowed to deteriorate. AMSTED Industries Inc. deserves high praise for its positive attitude despite the severe and seemingly unending recession in the railroad supply field.

Prior to its closing, the Granite City foundry was the nation's largest producer of cast steel side frames and bolsters, which form the undercarriages of rail freight cars. Originally known as the American Steel Foundry Co., the Granite City plant was one of eight independent steel foundries that merged in 1902 to form ASF. The peak annual volume of 25,000 car sets, also known as rail car trucks, was attained here in 1979.

As American Steel Foundries President Norman A. Berg sees it, "We're delighted to be in a position to prepare our facility. The decision to begin a readying phase came about because of improvement in our railroad products business. We're encouraged by the orders we're receiving, and want to make certain we're in a position to meet the demand if the trend continues."

It remains to be seen whether reopening will occur. But all hope and prayer that new chapters will be added to the plant's long and proud history.

City services may improve

Sometimes city government takes on characteristics of Harpo Marx pointing in two directions when asked where to find the answer to a problem.

Harpo seemed in charge whenever aldermen raised questions concerning the city's street and engineering departments. The elected street superintendent, Mac Warfield, had no authority to tell the mayor's appointed Engineering Department what to do and vice versa, but both departments had to operate in unison on some projects to get them done. As a result, not as much got done as hoped.

Mayor Von Dee Cruse last week offered a solution. He said his appointed Engineering Department is answerable to Warfield on all projects involving the Street Department.

Warfield acknowledged his need to have some authority over engineering but added that Cruse must see to it that engineering carries out orders.

Cruse has made it possible for Warfield to be more efficient and Warfield reacted favorably. We applaud this cooperative attitude and expect in the next year to see it result in improved services to city residents.

Regional labor councils merge

Because the Granite City area played a leading role in establishing the national labor movement early in this century, it is noteworthy that the Tri-City Trades and Labor Council has just gone out of existence, merging with the Edwardsville-Collinsville Council and the Alton-Wood River Federation.

Their successor organization, the Greater Madison County Federation of Labor, AFL-CIO, also has been given jurisdiction in Jersey and Calhoun counties. Each local union affiliated with any of the three groups has become a part of the new federation.

The Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers and similar groups formed the Congress of Industrial Organizations while craft unions created the American Federation of Labor. The CIO and AFL then merged; the consolidation here taking place at a time when William Webb headed the local CIO and Edwin Reiske led the AFL. Reiske remained active in the combined Trades and Labor Council.

Presentation of the new charter is planned at 7:30 p.m. July 28 at the Machinists Center in East Alton. The joining of more than 100 locals will result in the new federation becoming one of the largest in Illinois.

Baker wins top coaching honor

National honors earned by local schools are numerous, but it always is pleasant to see the list grow. In recent days, Gene Baker, a teacher and soccer coach at Granite City High School, has been chosen as National High School Coach of the Year.

The award is richly deserved. His student-athletes have captured many high school championships and achieved much in college and professionally. He and they are winners in the best meaning of the word.

Pontoon's TIF could cause less service or higher taxes

To the editor:

Within the last 18 months, the Village of Pontoon Beach, has undertaken to consider and adopt various tax increment financing (TIF) district proposals.

At this point, three different proposals have been put forth: Chouteau Trace No. 1, Chouteau Trace No. 2 and Timber Lake. Each of these proposals calls for new tax revenues generated by real estate taxes within the TIF areas to be used to finance the development of infrastructure such as streets and utilities, and to pay other development costs of the proposed projects.

The taxing bodies, including the Mitchell Fire Protection District, which Chouteau Trace No. 1 calls for the development of 100 multi-family apartments, a 100-room hotel, 200,000 square foot floor retail center, six highway service units and 57 duplexes. It projects an assessed valuation of $8,746,240.

Were it not for the TIF program, the fire protection district could receive approximately $32,000 in tax revenues from the proposed development. Under the TIF program, however, the fire district will continue to receive only $40 per year. At the same time, the development, if it occurs, will place a significantly higher burden on the fire district to render services within the TIF area.

Similarly, the Chouteau Trace development could generate new tax revenues of approximately $30,000 per year and the Timber Lake development $8,900 per year, based on the figures contained in the proposals and the most recent tax rate for the fire protection district. Under the TIF program, however, these revenues will not go to the fire protection district but will be used to pay development costs.

In the case of each of the proposed developments, because of increases in the population and use intensity within the area, it is anticipated there will be significantly greater demands placed on the fire protection district for services. The proliferation of TIF proposals and projects compels the district to inform the public that these projects, should they come to fruition, will likely increase the burden on the remaining portions of the district to provide the necessary level of services for the TIF areas.

While the Village of Pontoon Beach, through its present mayor, has expressed a willingness to work with the fire protection district to alleviate these financial burdens on the district, there is no assurance that subsequent administrations will have the same attitude or that the village will have the capacity to render such assistance to the fire protection district.

Nothing in the current TIF proposals for any of the three projects calls for any sort of assistance to the fire protection district for tax revenues devoted to the TIF program.

The Mitchell Fire Protection District makes this statement concerning the proposed TIF projects sponsored by Pontoon Beach in order that persons living within the fire protection district and paying taxes may understand that it may become necessary for them to pay higher taxes in order to maintain the level of fire services within the district or, alternatively, it may be necessary for services to be reduced as a result of the increased burdens placed on the fire protection district without a corresponding increase in tax revenues.

To j-grads

Journalism school's been out about two months and some grads are facing realities they ignored or weren't taught.

No, top grades did not guarantee a job at one of the nation's top dailies. Logic should have told you that.

Fewer than 1,700 dailies exist in this country and that number is shrinking while thousands of j-school grads annually enter a supply-and-demand job market.

Jobs at top dailies are few, but some of your j-school professors pumped you full of sunshine, convincing you that you're too good for a weekly, but then he's eating three squares a day and you're eating your socks.

You'll eventually form your own conclusion about the j-school professors who've led you down the proverbial primrose path, but just so you'll recognize reality, here's mine:

You have associated degrees in broadcast and print journalism, both with honors, a B.S. degree in mass communication with an "A" average, and a Master of Arts degree in mass communication with a magna cum laude average.

No big deal. Really. With all my "letters," my first job was with a St. Louis show store, then a crew drilling for natural gas in Elk City, Okla., then a St. Louis convenience store, then a Mississippi River barge company.

Eventually, a job paying nearly nothing came up at a no-name, small circulation weekly. I suspect most people would have turned it down out of pride or maybe frustration. I took it.

What I went through may be better or worse than what you're experiencing, but if you're sitting there looking for a job in journalism, consider weeklies.

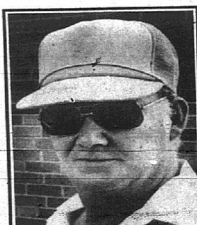

When you work at a weekly, the people in town will identify your name with your writing—something that you will rarely experience at a daily. Your stories will appear with regularity on the front page of a weekly, but if you work for a daily, the experience comes seldom, if ever.

Sure, dailies do many things well and better than weeklies, but while you're sitting there thinking about whether you have a future in journalism, don't count weeklies out. Once you begin working at a weekly, you may find it's what you wanted all along.

Is Metro Link good use of tax money?

Planning for the Metro Link light-rail system, connecting East St. Louis and downtown St. Louis to Lambert Airport, is pushing forward. The construction cost of approximately $288 million will be funded by the federal government. The system will be operated by the Bi-State Development Agency. Do you think this is a good use of taxpayers' money?

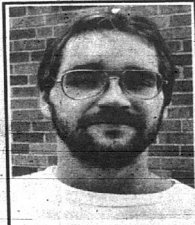

Jim Boyer,
Granite City

"Yes, I do. I really do because we need it and because we're not getting enough back from the government for the tax money we're paying in. I think people should get more back for their tax money and know where it's going."

Maria Cook,
Granite City

"I don't know, with so many people having cars. They're going to build a rail-system and no one's going to ride on it, like the buses."

Gerald Werner,
Madison

"It could be worse. They could be spending (tax money) on a lot of other things. At least they're trying to get some mass transportation to help the area. I'd rather see it go for (Metro Link) than a lot of other things."

The Granite City Division, National Steel Corp., announced new appointments in its Hot Rolled Products Department and Ironmaking Division. Vice President-General Manager Bill Swanson and Assistant Manager William H. Sangster announced the appointment of John Wendling to director, Hot Rolled Products, and the appointment of Kenneth J. Leonard to acting director, Ironmaking. He came to the Granite City Division from the corporate headquarters, Pittsburgh, in 1984 as the general superintendent, Ironmaking, and was named as director, Ironmaking, in 1986. Wendling replaces Harry Wright, who was recently appointed senior operations engineer. Leonard was appointed to replace Wendling. Leonard was formerly manager, Facility Engineering. He had been associated with the Engineering Department since his transfer to the Granite City Division from the corporate headquarters in 1984.

Bill Matthews retires

Wilbert "Bill" Matthews Jr., a utilityman at the Central Illinois Public Service Co. Coffeen Power Station, retired July 1 following more than 14 years of service at the station. He joined the company in 1974. Matthews is a native of Madison and graduated from Dunbar High School.

Robert Jackson promoted

Robert L. Jackson has been named manager of the Southern Division, Illinois-American Water Co. He was formerly operations manager-production of the Southern Division. Jackson joined the American System in 1952 at the Terre Haute Water Works Corp. He moved from there to the East St. Louis & Interurban Water Co., now Illinois American, in 1970. He became manager of the Granite City District in 1973 and held that position until 1987, when he was named operations manager.

Olin moves plants; one into and one out of East Alton

Olin Corp. in East Alton is moving a tube manufacturing plant, which employs 82, to Cuba, Mo., and replacing it with a copper foil plant that may employ 30 to 40.

The new plant in Cuba, about 80 miles southwest of St. Louis, may employ as many as 250, a city official said.

The net impact on Metro East employment is uncertain, because some or all of the 82 people who now work at the tube manufacturing plant may be absorbed into other Olin operations in East Alton, said company spokesman Larry B. Maher.

"It's difficult to say. When you employ more than 4,000, fluctuations of 25 to 30 are not a big number," said Maher. All the local workers may be absorbed into the local work force if the economy keeps growing and demand for Olin products increases, he said.

The company is moving the tube plant, which Olin calls Fineweld Tube, to make room for the foil operation and to build a more efficient tube plant. An Olin spokesman said he is not sure whether wages will be lower in Cuba.

The 50,000 square foot plant in Cuba is under construction, and officials said they expect completion by the end of this year.

Cuba City Clerk Elmer Snelson said the city gave Olin incentives to locate there. She said the city agreed to build roads and electric service to the city industrial park where the plant is to be located.

She said the city of 2,000 will also give Olin a rebate on power use in the first year of operation.

The union that represents the current 62 Fineweld Tube employees tried to persuade the company not to make the move, said Ken Knott, business agent for District 9 of the International Association of Machinists and Aero Space Workers.

"There is no way we can force them to stay here," said Knott.

The copper foil-making plant will begin operations in early 1989, said Olin Brass Group President James G. Hascall. He said the new operation will be in the tube plant building.

Dollar stronger, world markets slow

By Bob Hardestad

The United States dollar is finally making a recovery. Between 1985 and 1987 the dollar took a big plunge. Most foreign currencies rode the wave up as the dollar almost disappeared from sight.

The dollar erosion caused a tremendous increase in exports of American products. At the same time, imports slowed significantly. The value of foreign currencies were great and purchasing power could buy much more from the United States than at any time in the last 10 years.

Now that the dollar is strengthening again there are only a few areas in the world that seem to be experiencing strong growth. With the exception of Great Britain, the other European countries show stagnated growth. The big winner as progress continues is the Pacific Basin area of the world, Japan, South Korea, Taiwan and Hong Kong to name the biggies.

When you consider the United States economic index is growing at the rate of 3 percent and that Japan is growing at a rate of 13 percent it is easy to see why the Pacific Basin area is growing so quickly.

Industry is booming throughout the Pacific Rim Region. One of the main reasons is that employment costs and pay are very low. Probably the lowest in the world. Production is good and so a good product can be purchased at a relatively inexpensive cost.

Last year, bond prices were very strong in the Pacific Basin area. In the United States most mutual fund bond shares lost 1½ points, due to the poor movement of bonds.

Another increase in currency has occurred over the last month in Great Britain where the British pound has been rising strongly. Margaret Thatcher told the Bank of England not to intervene. In my opinion, whenever the government can stay out of manipulating the currency it will probably settle quicker where it should be.

Another positive factor for the dollar (increasing was May's release of the trade deficit figures. Last month for the first time this year the United States trade deficit plunged to a level of $9.75 billion, single digit figures.

If the deficit continues to decrease, the stronger the exports from the United States will be. The more dollars flow into the United States to be used in our economy. Any further tightening of the interest rates by the Federal Reserve over the next 30 days will be very bearish to the stock market.

About real estate

By Don Campbell

'What if' theory used for extra payments

Dear Mr. Campbell: I have been doing what you advise so often: making extra payments regularly to my mortgage principal.

I have enclosed a clipping of an investment column where the writer says that accelerating these payments is "OK, but not great." It makes me wonder if these extra payments wouldn't be better off in the bank.

F.F.

Answer: Several readers send me copies of the same column. While I don't personally know the gentleman who writes it, I do know that he has a good reputation for financial advice.

A lot of people share his view that accelerating the payoff of a mortgage looks a lot better on paper than it does in reality. His example: a 30-year, $30,000 mortgage at 9 percent calling for 360 monthly payments of $643.70 for a total of $233,731. By cutting it to 15 years, adding $167.71 to the monthly payments, you save $85,677 on your $30,000 mortgage.

He then reduces the saving, however, by assuming a 28 percent tax bracket and a 4 percent inflation rate. The $85,677 savings shrinks to $12,374.

I cannot quarrel with his math any more than I could with the people who used to chide me for advocating an accelerated mortgage payoff when you could invest that additional monthly payment in a good mutual fund yielding 8 percent a year and gaining in value another 10 percent a year. But why is it that I haven't heard anything from these people since last October when the Dow Jones Industrial Average plunged 508 points and it was a lucky mutual fund that didn't lose more than 25 percent of its assets?

It's all a part of the "what if?" argument — "assuming" a tax rate of 28 percent and an inflation rate of 4 percent. The theory is that the tax deductibility and the declining value of the dollar in the future erode much of the savings in interest. And it's popular to say, as this adviser does, that "talking about a dollar now and a dollar 15 to 30 years from now is comparing apples to oranges." It has a new ring to it, but how pertinent is it?

So, sure enough, that dollar you pay on your mortgage acceleration five years from today is going to be worth less than you are prepaying today. But both the dollar amount you owe your lender and the dollar amount of your prepayment are fixed and are reducing your indebtedness by a fixed amount regardless of what it will buy in terms of groceries. This cheaper-dollar argument is hurting the lender, not you.

What puzzles me in all of these arguments about how accelerating your mortgage payoff, decided to pay because of the impact of inflation, is that they all seem to take the position that your house, as an investment, is as static as a lump of coal, which is nonsense. The value of inflation is a sure bet: then the value of your home, and your equity, are appreciating in tandem with it.

Consumer tips

Funeral arrangement tips — thinking ahead stressed

Q. Could you give us some tips on arranging for a funeral?

A. Most decisions about purchasing funeral goods and services are made by people who are grieving and under time constraints.

The bereaved individual who is arranging for a funeral is often in a very vulnerable position, thus making the funeral selection a difficult experience. Thinking ahead may help you make informed and thoughtful decisions about funeral arrangements.

In this way, you can carefully choose the specific items you want and need and can compare prices offered by one or more funeral providers. In addition, the deceased body may be donated (either directly or after a ceremony) to a medical or educational institution.

To help ensure that your wishes are carried out, you may want to write down your preferences. It may also be helpful to tell relatives and other responsible persons what you have decided.

The best protection that a bereaved person can have during this period is the concern of a close friend.

If you have to make funeral arrangements, take with you a friend or family member who is less distraught, or even a member of your clergy or an attorney. Be sure to take along someone whose judgment you respect and whose opinions you will listen to when emotional trauma may cloud your thinking.

It is far better to rely on the advice of a less emotionally involved friend than solely on that of a funeral director who, as a business person, is concerned with selling merchandise and services.

Funeral costs

Q. We recently suffered a death in our family. Later, after the funeral was over, we discussed the cost and felt it was rather expensive. Are there any guidelines funeral directors have to legally follow?

A. Yes. The Federal Trade Commission developed a trade regulation concerning funeral industry practices. It is called the Funeral Rule, and its purpose is to enable consumers to obtain information about funeral arrangements.

In general, the rule makes it easier for you to select only those goods and services you want or need and to pay for only those you select.

For example, now you can find out the cost of individual items over the telephone. Also, when you inquire in person about funeral arrangements, the funeral home will give you a written price list of the goods and services available.

Once you have made your decision, the funeral provider will give you an itemized statement with the total cost of the funeral goods and services you select. This statement also will disclose any legal, cemetery, or crematory requirements that compel you to purchase any specific funeral goods or services.

The funeral provider must give you this statement after you select the funeral goods and services that you would like. The statement combines in one place the prices of the individual items you are considering for purchase, as well as the total price. Thus, you can decide whether to add or subtract items to get what you want.

People helping people

That's what the Sisters of Divine Providence, a Catholic community of religious women, have been doing since they first came to Granite City 67 years ago. Today, St. Elizabeth Medical Center is built on their foundation of courage and faith. It was their courage that enabled them to take over the operation of a hospital which had known the direction of three different groups during its first 10 years. These women's faith in Providence helped build a small local hospital into the second largest medical facility in the Metro-East area.

That same courage and faith is still evident today in the fact that the Sisters have chosen to remain in the Quad-Cities and to continue to develop a health care center system that integrates the needs of the total person—physically, mentally and spiritually.

In the last six decades, St. Elizabeth Medical Center has expanded its services throughout Madison County and the surrounding areas, providing patients with the most modern, most technologically advance systems of acute and non-acute care possible.

SEMC's newest services include: Optifast Weight Loss Program, Renal Dialysis, Cardiac Catheterization Services, Magnetic Resonance Scanning, Mammography Exams, Going Strong Health Assessments, Occupational Health Clinic, Work Hardening Program, and Private Duty Nursing Program.

But our care cannot be measured solely by our medical and technological capabilities. At St. Elizabeth's, care is not just our job; it's our mission.

As the number two employer in Granite City, St. Elizabeth Medical Center employs over 1,200 people, providing services for more than 15,000 inpatients and nearly 60,000 outpatients annually.

St. Elizabeth Medical Center Analysis of Expenditures

2. Fees	6.2%
3. Supplies	14.8%
4. Interest	5.7%
5. Depreciation	6.8%
6. Other	12.0%

Built on a firm foundation and looking toward an exciting future, SEMC remains a medical center with a mission: to provide for the health care needs of our community today—and tomorrow.

Democratic, Republican National Conventions worth your attention

Good government. That's how a lot of newspapers might describe their goals, if they had to sum them up in two words.

With that in mind, the conventions of the major political parties are important to newspapers and readers. The nation's and free world's leader will be chosen Nov. 8 from the two who are picked as presidential nominees this summer.

I'VE ATTENDED A few national and international conventions, including Rotary, Boy Scouts and Chamber of Commerce, but never a national political convention.

It's the kind of event you can follow better through television, radio, newspapers and magazines. If you attended in person, it would be an exciting experience, but you might be "too close to the trees to see the forest."

People who have attended the Indianapolis 500-mile auto race say much the same. They're glad they made the trip, and the day of the event was thrilling, but they could have followed the actual race more easily by watching TV.

Regional Roundup

By Bill Winter

I'VE MET two presidents and seen most of the others (of the last half-century) in person. Metro East votes are coveted by all the candidates, who usually visit here.

The first president I remember is Franklin D. Roosevelt, observed only in motion picture newsreels but heard often in "fireside chats" broadcast over the radio.

After Harry Truman's upset victory in 1948, Democrats' hopes in the 1950s turned to the Illinois governor, Adlai E. Stevenson.

As our state's chief executive in 1948-52, Stevenson got high marks. He ordered State Police raids, in Madison and Venice, that permanently closed two long-time gambling casinos and betting parlors, the 200 Club and Hyde Park Club.

STEVENS ON was intelligent, principled and an eloquent speaker, but he had the misfortune of running for president against the Allies' leading World War II hero, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander of the invasion of Europe.

Pres. Truman thought so highly of "Ike" that he offered to back him for the Democratic nomination, but Eisenhower gained a close, come-from-far-behind GOP convention victory over Sen. Robert Taft.

Early in the fall of 1952, aides rated Ike as an awkward campaigner and said he was "running like a dry creek." But he won overwhelmingly. I heard him talk while I was in the Army in Virginia, and exchanged waves with him while he sat high in an open automobile rolling along Broad Street in Richmond.

ARMY BUDDIES feared a military man like Eisenhower would extend our two-year inductions, but he didn't and instead worked to bring the Korean war to an end.

Technically, it was a police action and then a "Conflict," just as Vietnam later was destined to become an "Era." Our national leaders didn't want to concede they had involved America in anything as nasty as a "War," so they rewrote history with their own description.

Nevertheless, I admired Pres. Truman, who after retiring spoke at a dinner at Venice-Mason American Legion Post 307. I consider him and Pres. Eisenhower as being among the best of the presidents in recent decades.

IT WAS a very good year; 1956, that is. I got married, moved into a new home and furnished it, among other things, with a new-fangled gadget called a television set. There I watched both 1952 nominees nominated a second time.

Illnesses and foreign developments prompted some to conclude Eisenhower was vulnerable in '56. The night before the election, Stevenson said on TV that voters ought to elect a man, himself, who could live out the next four years.

Eisenhower won a second term with ease and, as it turned out, was destined to outlive Stevenson by a number of years.

GAVEL-TO-GAVEL coverage was the norm for TV networks but ABC later began to edge away and now all three main networks plan only selective coverage of the Democratic meeting which will start July 18 in Atlanta and the Republican convention that will open Aug. 16 in New Orleans.

Cable News Network will offer more extensive coverage than NBC, CBS or ABC.

Book gives up-to-date information about adoption

For singles and couples who are interested in adoption, a newly-published paperback, "Adoption: A Guide to Adoption in Illinois," offers updated information about adoption requirements, procedures, agencies and support groups.

Published by the Junior League of Chicago in conjunction with the Adoption Information Center of Illinois (AICI), the book is designed "to assist people through the sometimes confusing, often lengthy journey toward adoption," says Marilyn Panichi, AICI director. The book is available for purchase through contributions from the Butz Foundation and the Junior League of Chicago.

It was first published in 1981 by the AICI and the Junior League of Chicago. The updated version reflects the large number of changes in the adoption process since that time.

"Prospective adoptive parents may feel overwhelmed by the less about adoption regulations," says Judy York, president of the Junior League of Chicago.

"This book includes a list of licensed adoption agencies in Illinois, as well as much-expanded section explaining the entire adoption process."

Part one contains an introduction to adoption and includes information about the types of children who are waiting for permanent homes, the Adoption Information Center of Illinois, the role of an attorney, "identified adoption," interstate adoption and "open adoption."

Part two describes agency requirements, adoption preparation, licensing requirements, selection of an adoptive family for a child, adoption assistance, employee adoption benefits, intercountry adoption, post-legal adoption services and the Illinois adoption registry.

Part three lists Illinois adoption agencies, and part four is a list of adoptive parent and adoption support groups.

A $5 donation is requested to obtain the book. A check or money order may be made payable to the Adoption Information Center of Illinois and sent to the organization at 201 N. Wells, Suite 1342, Chicago, Ill. 60606. To discuss adoption, persons may call AICI's toll-free number, 1-800-572-2300.

Panichi says that in any given month, there are 350 Illinois children waiting for an adoptive family. They are black children of all ages, white children over age 11, Hispanic children over age 6, children who are part of a sibling group, and/or children who have a developmental, emotional or physical disability.

In fiscal year 1987, 848 children were legally available for adoption in Illinois and 714 were legally adopted, according to figures from the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services.

State news

State steps up bid for Super Collider

Gov. James Thompson praised the General Assembly for appropriating $33.5 million to be used for development of Illinois is awarded a proposed $4 billion to $6 billion project for high-energy physics research.

The project will involve the construction of a 53-mile underground tunnel ring and could start as early as mid-1989 in DuPage, Kane and Kendall counties. Illinois is one of seven states selected as finalists for the project. A decision is expected in November.

Sign interpreters directory available

The sixth edition of the "Directory of Interpreters for People Who Are Hearing Impaired," which lists 150 Illinois sign language interpreters, will be available Aug. 1.

The 35-page directory lists sign language interpreters from throughout the state, including their certification level, situation preferences and whether the person is experienced in interpreting for people who are deaf-blind. Those who wish to be added to the mailing list may write to call Kim Gibson-Harman, Illinois Department of Rehabilitation Services, 100 W. Randolph, Suite 8-100, Chicago, Ill. 60601; (voice) 312-917-2939; or (TDD) 312-917-3040.

IEPA to release status of waste site cleanups

A soon-to-be-released report, "Cleaning Illinois - 1988," will list hazardous waste sites as well as responses that have evolved in the last two years.

The Illinois Hazardous Waste Cleanup Program, in existence for four years, works with the national Superfund list. There are 27 sites on the list, with the number expected to hit 50 in five years.

New problems that have assumed higher profiles are leaking underground storage tanks in the last several months, and about 150 sites where coal tar was buried at abandoned gas manufacturing plants. Coal tar is suspected of causing severe health problems.

Copies of the report will be distributed by Gov. James Thompson after this Friday and then may be obtained from the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency, 2200 Churchill Road, Box 19276, Springfield, Ill. 62794-9276.

Green-brown foam in rivers not harmful

The Illinois Environmental Protection Agency has announced that residents should not be concerned about patches of green and brown foam floating down large streams and rivers.

The naturally occurring foam is a composition of blue-green algae, green algae and diatoms created in rapid or simple areas of rivers. Algae are aquatic plants that live entirely submerged in water. Diatoms are another form of algae that are golden brown. The combination of heat and low water levels reduces the dissolved oxygen in rivers and streams, producing the foam. The foam may cause odors if trapped in debris.

TO ALL MITCHELL PUBLIC WATER DISTRICT CUSTOMERS

The following information is required by USEPA to be included in all public notification issued:

The United States Environmental Protection Agency (USEPA) sets drinking water standards and has determined that lead is a health concern at certain levels of exposure. There is currently a standard of 0.050 parts per million (ppm) (this is equivalent to 50 parts per billion.) Based on current health information, USEPA is likely to lower this standard significantly.

Part of the purpose of this notice is to inform you of the potential adverse health effects of lead. This is being done even though your water may not be in violation of the current standard.

USEPA and others are concerned about lead in drinking water. Too much lead in the human body can cause serious damage to the brain, kidneys, nervous system, and red blood cells. The greatest risk, even with short-term exposure, is to young children and pregnant women.

Lead leaches in your drinking water are likely to be highest: if your home or water system has lead pipes, or if your home has copper pipes with lead solder, and if the home is less than five years old, or if you have soft or acidic water, or if you sit in the pipes for several hours.

When using water which has been standing in your system for several hours or longer, be sure to flush the system as recommended above. The Mitchell Public Water District purchases their water from Illinois American Water Company. They are in compliance with State and Federal limits for lead in drinking water.

The water is clarified, filtered and disinfected by using chlorine. Fluoride is added to prevent dental caries. Stabilization using lime chemical treatment to adjust the pH of your water is practiced to prevent corrosion in the distribution system.

An extensive sampling program for lead indicated that the average lead content in the water delivered to your home is less than 5 PPB (parts per billion) this concentration is well below the limited of 50 PPB (parts per billion) allowed by the U. S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Mitchell Public Water District lines contains no lines that contain any lead in any way. We take 5 samples or more per month to be tested by the environmental control. No elevated amounts of lead have ever been detected during the District's routine sampling.

However, it is possible under specific circumstances that lead found in the customer's own plumbing or service lines may be leaking into water that has stood in the pipes for extended periods of time (like over night or during a vacation, etc.).

In the meantime, we would like to stress that this is an easily correctable situation. Water customers can eliminate virtually all lead from their water by letting the water run a minute or two in the morning or after work before taking a drink or cooking. The water doesn't need to be wasted. Flushing the commode serves the same purpose.

Customers can also fill a bottle with tap water at the end of the day to store in the refrigerator for use following the morning or after work.

There is no need to be alarmed about having any lead in your drinking water, but if you do have a question about it, please call Odie Busby at the Mitchell Public Water District office 931-0164 or home phone 931-0625 after 4 p.m.

SIUE quarterly journal's following international

What began as a literary journal that was to be the official organ of the Midwest Modern Language Association, published by Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, has grown to an international quarterly in its 23 years.

"Papers on Language and Literature" (PLL) has flourished under the guidance of Alvin Sullivan, professor of English language and literature at SIUE. He recently scored a coup for the journal by obtaining first rights to print a short story by William Styron.

Sullivan said permission was granted by Styron, who still holds the copyright.

"Blankenship," which Sullivan said will be used by scholars to compare Styron's later works, had heretofore never been published. A Pulitzer-Prize winner, Styron probably is best remembered for his novel, "The Confessions of Nat Turner and Sophie's Choice."

The PLL publishes 450 pages of literary criticism annually with 164 subscribers outside the United States and 836 in this country. Subscribers live as far away as Africa and Australia. Readers study PLL throughout Europe and there's even one subscription mailed to Turkey. "During its first year," Sullivan said, "PLL was known as 'Papers on English Language and Literature' but was changed to the present title.

Madison scholar/athletes win Army Reserve award

MADISON — Sheila Marshall and Howard Murray have been named winners of 1988 Army Reserve National Scholar/Athlete awards.

Both are June graduates of Madison High School and excelled in the NHS varsity track program.

Marshall and Murray were chosen to receive the award by faculty members and school administrators for "their outstanding achievement in both academics and athletics," a military spokesman said.

Staff Sgt. Mark McMurray of the Army Recruiting Station, 3675 Nameoki Road, presented each honoree with the Scholar/Athlete award, a bronze Olympic-style medal and a graduation ceremony at the school.

The Army Reserve's sponsorship of the National Scholar/Athlete Award is part of its continuing commitment to recognize outstanding achievements in both academics and athletics by this nation's youth, said McMurray.

Last year there were 20,056 Army Reserve National Scholar/Athlete winners from more than 10,500 American high schools.

Presentation of the award has become a tradition in many high schools. Since the inception in 1961 more than 30,000 American high school students have been recognized through this program.

The Army Reserve is the nation's oldest federal reserve force. Currently, 250,000 men and women serve in more than 3,000 units throughout the United States.

New company commander at U.S. Army Price Center

Capt. Paul E. Hutzky III has been named company commander of Headquarters Company, Charles Melvin Price Support Center, Granite City.

Hutzky previously worked in the Chinook Helicopter Project Manager's Office at the U.S. Army Aviation Systems Command, St. Louis.

A 1976 graduate of Schuyler Central School, he received a bachelor's degree in 1980 from Morehead (Ky.) State University.

Hutzky and his wife, Lisa, have been residing in St. Charles.

Navy Mothers donate to Willing Workers

The Quad Cities Navy Mothers Unit was called to order by Commander Mary Ann Rollberg. Sixteen were present.

An invitation for two guests was received for an open house at the USO Lambert Airport, St. Louis.

The members voted to donate $30 to the Willing Workers of America.

Members approved resolutions to be used as guidelines for voting at the National Convention in Springfield, Mo.

Hazel Jones gave a report on members who are ill.

An auction was held, with Jim George as the auctioneer.

The mystery package was won by Sharon McWilliams and special bingo by Edna Miller.

Stenitzer attends orientation

MARION, Ala. — Gregory M. Stenitzer, son of Mrs. Beatrice J. Stenitzer of Madison, attended an orientation during June at Marion Military Institute prior to attending the U.S. Army ROTC Basic Camp at Fort Knox, Ky.

The purpose of the mini camp is to further acquaint prospective Reserve Officer Training Corps cadets with the school, its academic offerings, the ROTC program, and the history of MMI.

Marion Military Institute sponsors 120 high school graduates at the ROTC Basic Camp every summer. The camp gives students a taste of Army life without any obligation to the Army.

At the same time, students are evaluated to determine if they possess the leadership potential of a future Army officer.

During the camp, students learn leadership skills and basic military skills such as map reading, land navigation, first-aid and the operation of a variety of military equipment.

They compete for a two-year Army ROTC scholarship worth $5,800 per year at Marion. Over 35 percent of the Marion-sponsored cadets win scholarships at the basic camp every year.

More than 200 generals and admirals began their military training at the 146-year-old school.

Army Reserve increases student loan repayments

Up to $20,000 may be applied toward qualified student loan repayments in return for enlisting in high-tech and medical career fields in the Army Reserves.

There is no denying the fact that the Saints of God are in a battle. Satan goes about as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour. We cannot prevent his coming, but we can resist him when he comes!

We are not defenseless. We are not at the mercy of Satan. We are more than conquerors through Jesus Christ our Lord. The one who dwells in us is a greater God than he who is in the world. If God be for us, who can be against us? Satan trembles at the name of Jesus, and Jesus said that if we believe, we could cast out devils in His name!

Do not let Satan take advantage of the weapons that God has given us. After all it brings glory to God when His Church prevails over Satan and his works. Be strong in the Lord and the power of His mighty.

Big Red football still exists here

The middle of July means the beginning of NFL training camps. For the first time in 28 years, it will be quiet in St. Louis.

But after thinking about it the other day, I believe I'm looking forward to the 1988 Big Red season as much as I ever have.

Now, I would much rather have the team still in St. Louis. But what's done is done, so it's time to make the best of the situation.

And the situation is not that bad for loyal Big Red fans — and there were, and are, a good number of us.

In fact, for some fans, they have a chance to see the Cardinals more this year than before. In case you missed KMOV-TV (Channel 4) announced it will televise all Big Red regular-season games to which CBS has the rights.

That includes all eight road games and five of the eight home games. Another home game — the home opener, in St. Louis — will be on ABC's Monday Night Football on September 12, when the Phoenix Cardinals face the Dallas Cowboys at Sun Devil Stadium.

That's 14 of the 16 regular-season games which will be televised here. And KSDK-TV (Channel 35) has not announced yet if it will televise the Cardinals' two NBC games. So still possible every game could be seen here.

That's a lot more games for the fan who couldn't make it to each stadium in recent years. Games that were seldom televised locally because the Big Red hardly ever had a sellout 72 hours prior to kickoff.

You will hear the obligatory blarney of many press agents who would rather see the Big Red drop off the face of the earth. They won't tell anybody. But most of them will end up watching the game when they can't watch it on TV.

They will watch all I can with having to worry about finding a parking spot in downtown St. Louis late on Sunday morning. The coaching staff and most of the players will be the same, so true loyal fans can't help but follow the team.

As the years go by and the players who played here fall by the wayside, interest may wane. But for this year, you can have a 50-yard line seat for as many Big Red games as you want. And if they don't do well, it's easier to take since they aren't the hometown team anymore.

But if they do well, we can feel good for Gene Stallings, a fine man. And we can feel good for hardworking veterans Stump Mitchell, Leonard Smith, J.T. Smith, Neil Lomax and Luis Sharpe.

Looking forward to it. Now, as for the existing pro sports scene in St. Louis. The Cardinals miss Jack Clark. That was easy to predict when he left and even easier to say now. The acquisition of Bob Horner soothed some nerves, but even Horner at his best was not Clark.

For most of this decade, Clark and Dale Murphy were the two players in the National League truly feared by opposing pitchers. They inherited that level of respect from Mike Schmidt. The new breed of feared and dominating players is Darryl Strawberry, and possibly Will Clark and Andres Galarraga.

You just can't let players like that get away. You can bet the Mets won't lose Strawberry. In fact, you could say that Shea Stadium will be Strawberry's Field Forever.

The Stearns were doomed to failure. Pro soccer is not going to make it big in the United States in any form. The reason why is somewhat of a mystery. It was fun in the early years, but it was always somewhat of a passing fad.

The Blues made a risky move in hiring Brian Sutter as the coach. Blues coaches have never lasted long anyway, but Captain Milt could really have it rough. If the team remains average or regresses, Sutter could go crazy because he won't be able to go on the ice and do something about it.

And I fear how his relationship will be with men who just a couple of months ago were teammates and are now subordinates. Sutter's ability to work with Bernie Federko, his close friend with whom he came up through the farm system, will be important. Federko has been a mood-sport, and there is some potentially volatile chemistry brewing.

Pitching carries Triplets into playoffs

By Dave Whaley
Executive sports editor

With a little better defense to back up some solid pitching, the Triplets could make some serious noise as the District 22 playoffs open next week.

Post 113 will host Highland in the opening game of the North Division's four-team double elimination tournament on Monday. Highland missed a chance for second place when they lost 5-0 at Collinsville on Wednesday. Ken Bast shut out Post 439 on six hits.

It's a big difference getting to play at home," said manager Ralph Burnett. "There's no travel time and we're more comfortable here. It would be a tremendous advantage for us."

No matter where the game is played, Darin Hendrickson will be ready to pitch. He had a tremendous summer with a 6-1 record (5-1 in league play). He pitched five complete games, including his no-hitter against Alton. Hendrickson allowed 18 runs, but only five of them were earned as he sported a tidy 0.77 earned run average. He struck out 30 and walked 12 in 45½ innings.

"Darin's the guy we want out there when we need a game," Burnett said. "And I'm sure we'll see (Craig) Sands for Highland."

Maybe Sands has been attending summer school and hasn't been available on many weeknights. But the Triplets aren't doubting for a minute they will see the Rend Lake College ace.

"He'll be there Monday," said coach Woody Moad. "A victory would send Granite City against the winner of a game between Alton and the survivor of this weekend's single elimination tourney in the North (probably Edwardsville). That game would be Tuesday."

The Triplets won the regular-season title last year, assuring themselves of home games throughout the division playoffs. But they dropped the opener to Alton and had to fight back through the loser's bracket. They made it to the final game before losing 3-1 to Edwardsville.

"It's big to win that first one," Burnett said. "We put ourselves in a hole last year when we lost and we didn't quite recover. When you win, you put the pressure on the other teams and they've got to gamble a little more than you do."

If the Triplets finish third, they won't have a home game in the playoffs unless they meet up with the single elimination winner. And that isn't too likely. However, Granite City was 8-4 in league road games.

The pitching has been terrific. Mike Kraus has had a solid summer with a 5-1 (5-0 in league play) record and two saves. He pitched two complete games and had a 1.96 ERA in recovering from a disappointing high school season. Tim Black is 3-1 (3-0 in league play) with a 2.65 ERA. John Moad, the leading pitcher in high school, has pitched only four times and is 0-3 with a 5.70 ERA.

Granite City has allowed 114 runs, but only 66 of them were earned for a 2.95 team ERA. "I don't know which team will show up each night," said Burnett. "If we can establish some consistency, we can beat anyone. But we haven't got that consistency yet. But I like the lineup we had out there against Edwardsville (on Monday). And when we get John VanBuskirk (See PLAYOFFS, Page 5D)

Optimists hit the skids again

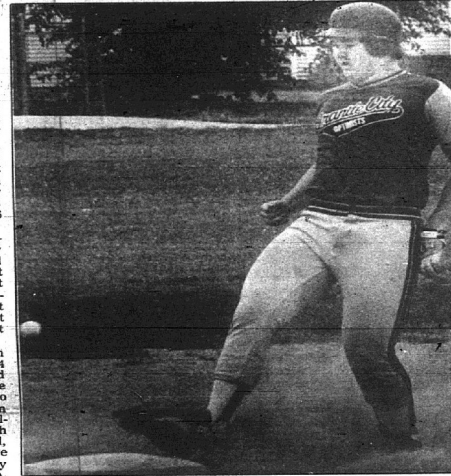

The momentum gained by a four-game winning streak has all been negated by a three-game losing streak for the Optimists.

Granite City fell to 8-9 in league play and 10-10 overall with a loss to league-power Brighton on Wednesday. A loss to Brighton (16-3 in league play, 26-4 overall) can be expected, but the Optimists let another one slip away on Tuesday at home.

Granite City City carried a 4-3 lead into the sixth inning against Edwardsville, but walks and a throwing error on a double play kept a four-run inning as Edwardsville hung on for a 7-6 win.

Two walks by starter and loser Kevin Wozniak and one by reliever Chris Wiehardt loaded the bases. Wiehardt got one out and got the second on a force at second base. But Brian Harshman's throw to first was in the dirt and bounced beyond the dugout as two runs scored to put Edwardsville 6-7 ahead 5-4.

Edwardsville followed with three more hits to take a 7-4 lead. But Lawrence appeared headed for an easy complete game when he got the first two outs in the seventh. But Tom Senczyn walked and Mike Mueller reached on an error. With runners at second and third, Matt Scherfke singled both home and moved to second as they were tying run on the throw home. But Lawrence fanned Wiehardt.

TOM SENCZYN of the Optimists pulls into third just ahead of the throw with another triple.

Paddlers beat Wedgewood for 3-0 mark

Newcomers get wins at Tri-City

By Joe Senter
Correspondent

GRANITE CITY — Tom Utley came to town and cooled off some hot super modifieds while Tom Helfrich gained his first U.M.P. late model victory Saturday at Tri-City Speedway.

Tim Snell of Madison was the early leader of the 20-lap super modified race. He led for three laps until Don Cruzen cruised by and led for the next few laps. Dick Carroll and Chip Thomas were in hot pursuit, but the powerful Chevy of Utley's was too much for the rest of the field.

Utley, of St. Charles, Mo., has been a top contender of the Allied Auto Racing Association. Following Utley at the checkered flag was Cruzen, Carroll and Thomas. Lou Thery Jr. and John Hanner Jr. took the heat races.

Helfrich, of Hauptstadt, Ind., won his first late model stock car feature of the season. Mike Wallace had been dominating that event. Ray Emling Jr. took the lead and hung on for the first eight laps. Bill Shaw and John Prior crashed on the fifth lap, but they were unhurt and returned after a yellow flag.

Helfrich, the promoter of the Hauptstadt Speedway who has been driving for 22 years, took over on the eighth lap as Wallace followed in close pursuit. Wallace had to settle for second with Emling third, Bert Cheatham fourth, Jim Rarick fifth and Prior sixth. Wallace and Rarick took the heat races.

John and Tom Seets were first and second, respectively, in the sportsman's car feature, with Rick Bayer third, Randy Korte fourth, Gary Archambault fifth and Jake Seets sixth. Korte led the 20-lap event for the first half. Archambault and John Seets won the heat races.

John Stanton won his second feature in a row in the street stock cars followed by Dave Jones, Don McElroy Jr. and Marty Kopp. Jones and McElroy took the heat races. Mel Perkins of Granite City was a victim of

Greenwald a man of many hats

By Carl Jacobs
Staff writer

SAUGET — Jim Greenwald is collecting hats. Not really, but he could. If the 36-year-old Granite City native had a derby for every job he had, his closet would be full.

Greenwald is the general manager for the Saugat Wizards of the Mon-Clair League. He is also the team's right fielder, part-time designated hitter and cleanup man. Outside of those duties, Greenwald is a part-time scout for the Chicago Cubs and manages the Oz nightclub in Saugat. In short, the man is a busy dude.

The Fourth of July weekend was a prime example of Greenwald's go-go life. He worked until 5 a.m. Saturday at Oz and had just enough time to make it to the first-round game of the Valseley Classic baseball tournament.

Greenwald, a glutton for punishment, then worked Saturday evening and five hours into Sunday before heading off to another tournament game at 10 a.m. He turned around and did the same routine Sunday evening/night. I think I think opportunity together and encourages a

"It was a tough weekend," he said. "After work I had just enough time to shower and get to the games."

But mention anything to do with baseball and Greenwald gets excited, even if he hasn't slept in 48 hours.

"I enjoy playing baseball and scouting," he said. "I just like being around baseball."

Greenwald, who has been playing amateur baseball since 1977, made himself more familiar with the sport when he became a Cub scout last year.

"Neil Fiala (Greenwald's teammate on the Wizards) talked about Ron Hollingsworth (the Cubs' head scout) and they came into the Oz one night," Greenwald said.

"We started talking baseball and they asked me to be a scout."

Greenwald is in charge of scouting Missouri players and getting a list ready for the annual amateur draft. He also organizes the tryout camp in Saugat.

"My region is Missouri, but I look at Illinois players," Greenwald said. "We don't neglect looking at any players we hear about."

Greenwald said the Cubs' tryout camps are not geared to sign players and to put them directly into the farm system. Instead, they are good for getting to know young players and follow them throughout their college careers.

"We talk to them and follow them through their careers," Greenwald said. "The camps give us a potential prospect list. And if they continue to improve in college, we are in touch with them."

When Greenwald became a scout, he got to meet the Cubs' top brass and they gave him front-row seats.

"It was very exciting," he said. "They treated me nice. They're a class organization."

What pleases Greenwald is that the Cubs are using their farm system more and more and are winning with it instead of trading and signing older free agents.

"They are bringing in home-grown people, so to speak," Greenwald said.

Current Cub stars such as Shawn Dunston, Rafael Palmeiro, Greg Maddux, Dave Martinez and Mark Grace have come through the Chicago system. As recently as 1984, when the Cubs won their division, Lee Smith was the only player of any note who came up through the farm system.

While Greenwald's playing days won't last forever and he may have to surrender one hat of his menagerie, he sees no immediate end to his scouting duties.

Almost assuredly, when Greenwald does hang up his cleats, he will get a different brim. Something to do with baseball would be a good guess.

Meeting the fans

Many Cardinals fill time with personal appearances

By Mark Holland
Staff affiliate
Not having a ticket or access to television is hardly an excuse for fans not to see their favorite Cardinals in action.

Play baseball is what they're paid to do, but a number of Cardinals fill some of their off-field hours meeting their public up close through volunteer personal appearances.

Some sign autographs at department stores or car dealerships. Others speak to youth groups and schools. Many devote time to their pet charities — or any worthy cause that might benefit from a player's presence.

As anyone who's tried to buy a field box seat can attest, the same team is a popular draw — even with its recent slump. Phone calls requesting a player's presence flood the Cardinal office to the tune of several hundred per year, said Ted Savage, assistant director of community relations.

Savage, who fields many of the requests, doesn't have the final say in who appears where. Players are at liberty to fill their own agendas, but with games and travel, demand inevitably exceeds supply.

"We get about 800 requests per year," Savage said. "There's no way they (the players) can — or will — do that many appearances. If they did, they wouldn't have time for games."

"Somewhere, players have to draw the line. If they let the public dictate things, they'd be out there all day, every day."

All-Star shortstop Ozzie Smith, who comes as close to being out there non-stop as anyone, might encourage grade-school students to say no to drugs, but he has a tough time refusing an invitation for an autograph session. Fulfilling the deluge of requests he gets takes some serious wizardry, but the bottom line is drawn by the player, Savage said.

Savage said the most common request is for players to sign autographs at a function. This allows some of the newer players — or players who shun making speeches — to meet their fans in a more relaxed setting.

"Naturally, our rookies aren't used to it," Savage said. "The players who've been here three or five years know how to do these things and handle themselves in public."

"Almost all of them enjoy some aspect of appearances," said John Kendall, Cardinal promotions assistant. "Some of them aren't particularly fond of speaking to large crowds. Those are the guys who are more inclined to do an autograph session, where they can make contact with a large group on a one-on-one basis."

With Smith's limited availability, even for requests made several weeks in advance — often it'll be a Vince Coleman, Danny Cox or a Joe Magrane to take the offer. Kendall's job is to inform callers of a player's availability. A player may request Smith's backup and get a no-way-Joe. Travel commitments figure prominently, and a good portion of the requests are for weekend events, which can spread the squad pretty thin.

"And let's not forget their full-time jobs. On game days, some players like to arrive at Busch Stadium several hours early for rubdowns, extra running or just to unwind. And starting pitchers generally won't work on days they're slated to pitch."

"I'm very sensitive to the starting pitchers' rotation," Kendall said. "When someone calls and asks for a starting pitcher, they usually give four weeks' lead time. But with things like injuries, it's very tough to determine at that time when a pitcher's scheduled to pitch."

Injuries may affect the fate of the team and whether someone can do a cameo at a celebrity golf tournament, but judging by the busy phone lines in Savage's office, the public's support has not wavered.

"I think our fans are very sophisticated," Savage said. "Even if we're going bad, they still want us to come out and talk about it."
